Who is included in my circle of love? Who is one person in need that the Lord is inviting me to love? Today we hear strong words. Should we take Jesus literally? Is it right to hate our family members? To interpret this literally would contradict the commandments. It would be against the radical separation, without conditions, from things and affections (the original claims to hate the past); the commitment to carry the cross, following the narrow path of fidelity to the demands of the Gospel; and finally, wisdom and firmness in following, assuming the new standard of values he proposes and demands of discipleship. We see an example of such inclusive love in St. Paul. In today’s first reading, Paul asks Philemon to accept back a slave, Onesimus. Paul is inviting Philemon to forgive Onesimus. What is Philemon to accept back a slave, Onesimus. Onesimus has done something wrong (perhaps theft) and so runaway from Philemon. Paul is inviting Philemon to forgive Onesimus. What is Philemon to accept back a slave, Onesimus. Onesimus has become like a son to him. Although he knows Onesimus is a sinner, Paul stands up for this slave and advocates for him as if he were his own son. Onesimus is included in Paul’s love. The expression you cannot be my disciple is repeated three times in the Gospel today. It is a negative reminder that tries to draw the face of a true disciple. Three features are highlighted: the radical separation, without conditions, from things and affections (the original claims to hate the past); the commitment to carry the cross, following the narrow path of fidelity to the demands of the Gospel; and finally, wisdom and firmness in following, assuming the new standard of values he proposes and demands of discipleship.
